Tasty Dishes for Summer.

BAKED PEAS

1 pint fresh peas
6 slices bacon
1 cupful cream
1 teaspoonful salt
1-2 teaspoonful pepper
Cut the bacon in small pieces and brown, add the peas which have been cooked and drained, the cream, salt, and pepper. Put in a casserole and cover with the bread-crumbs and bake for twenty minutes at 375° F.

SPICY GREEN BEANS

1 quart green string beans
1 cupful chopped onion
1 teaspoonful salt
1-2 teaspoonful butter, fat or oil
1-2 teaspoonful nutmeg
1 cupful cream
Sauté the onion in the fat until tender; add to the cooked beans with the cream, nutmeg, and salt. Simmer for ten minutes.

RHUBARB PUFF

1 cupful finely chopped rhubarb
2 tablespoonfuls butter, fat or oil
1-2 cupfuls pastry flour
1 cupful sugar
1-2 cupful milk
1-2 cupful baking powder
2 eggs
1-2 teaspoonful salt
Cream the butter and sugar, add the eggs, well beaten, the milk, gradually with the flour which has been sifted before measuring and then mixed with the baking powder. Then stir in the rhubarb. Roll out a thin layer, and add the sugar. When cold, freeze the same as ice cream.

RHUBARB SHERBET

1 quart water
2 tablespoonfuls cold water
1 quart rhubarb
1-2 tablespoonful gelatin
1 cupful sugar
1 lemon
Cut the rhubarb into small pieces and boil in the quart of water until tender. Strain the gelatin in the two tablespoonfuls of cold water, pour the hot rhubarb over it, strain, and add the juice and grated rind of the lemon, and the sugar. When cold, freeze the same as ice cream.

TASTY SPINACH

1-2 peck spinach
1-2 pound mushrooms
6 slices bacon
1-2 teaspoonful salt
1-2 teaspoonful pepper
1-2 teaspoonful paprika
1-2 cupful milk
Fry the spinach, retaining in the pan a tablespoonful of the fat, and in it brown slightly the sliced mushrooms. Sprinkle over them the flour, and add the milk and seasonings. Cook slowly for ten minutes. Place the cooked and drained spinach in the center of a platter with the bacon slices around the edge, and pour the sauce over the spinach.

RHUBARB WITH PINEAPPLE

1 quart rhubarb
1-2 cupful sugar
1 pineapple
1-2 teaspoonful salt
Cut the rhubarb in short lengths, shred the pineapple, and cook with the salt in the upper part of a double boiler without water until tender. Add the sugar, cook until dissolved; remove and chill. The amount of sugar used depends somewhat on the rhubarb.

RED DRESSING FOR ASPARAGUS

1-2 cupful oil
2 hard cooked eggs
1-2 cupful tomato catsup
1-2 cupful vinegar
1-2 teaspoonful salt
1-2 teaspoonful pepper
1 head lettuce
1 bunch asparagus
1 green pepper
1 red pepper
1-2 teaspoonful chives
Put a piece of ice in a bowl and add the oil, stirring until it thickens slightly. Add the vinegar, salt, pepper, and other ingredients chopped fine. Mix well. Place the cooked asparagus tips on lettuce, and pour over the above dressing.

Rescue Your Faded Hosiery.

How we all love the pretty light stockings in shades of tan and gray that are so popular at this season of the year—but how discouraging it is to wear them but two or three times and have them lose their color! At the Institute we have found that a little bit of dye is effective in restoring stockings which have behaved in this manner.

The dyeing of stockings is a simple task. It takes no longer than three-quarters of an hour for the whole job, including preparation of the dye. It requires no special equipment, it requires nothing more than your starch kettle. In spite of the fact that it is essential to know the weight of material to determine how much dye is required, we can eliminate for you the need of a scale. After weighing many pairs of silk stockings, we have found that they average about one-eighth of a pound, that is, two ounces. Most directions stipulate the amount of dye and water required for one pound of material. All you will have to do, then, is to take one-eighth of this amount. If you use several pairs of stockings, you will have to increase the amount accordingly.

If you choose to make your own stockings, a lighter shade than they already are, or if you choose to change the color from a shade of gray to beige, cocoa, or one of the other shades of tan, you must first strip this color. Several manufacturers of household dye now make a chemical for this purpose. The directions accompanying it should be strictly followed to get the most effective results. After the color is discharged, you can proceed with the dyeing.

First, the dye must be dissolved in a small amount of water. It is then added to the hot dye bath through a strainer. A wire strainer lined with several thicknesses of cheesecloth makes an excellent strainer. The directions accompanying it should be strictly followed to get the most effective results. After the color is discharged, you can proceed with the dyeing.

When the dye bath reaches the boiling point, the stockings, which have been previously washed, should be entered and boiled for the length of time stated in the directions. During this time, which is usually about ten minutes, the stockings should be kept in constant motion with a stick or long-handled spoon.

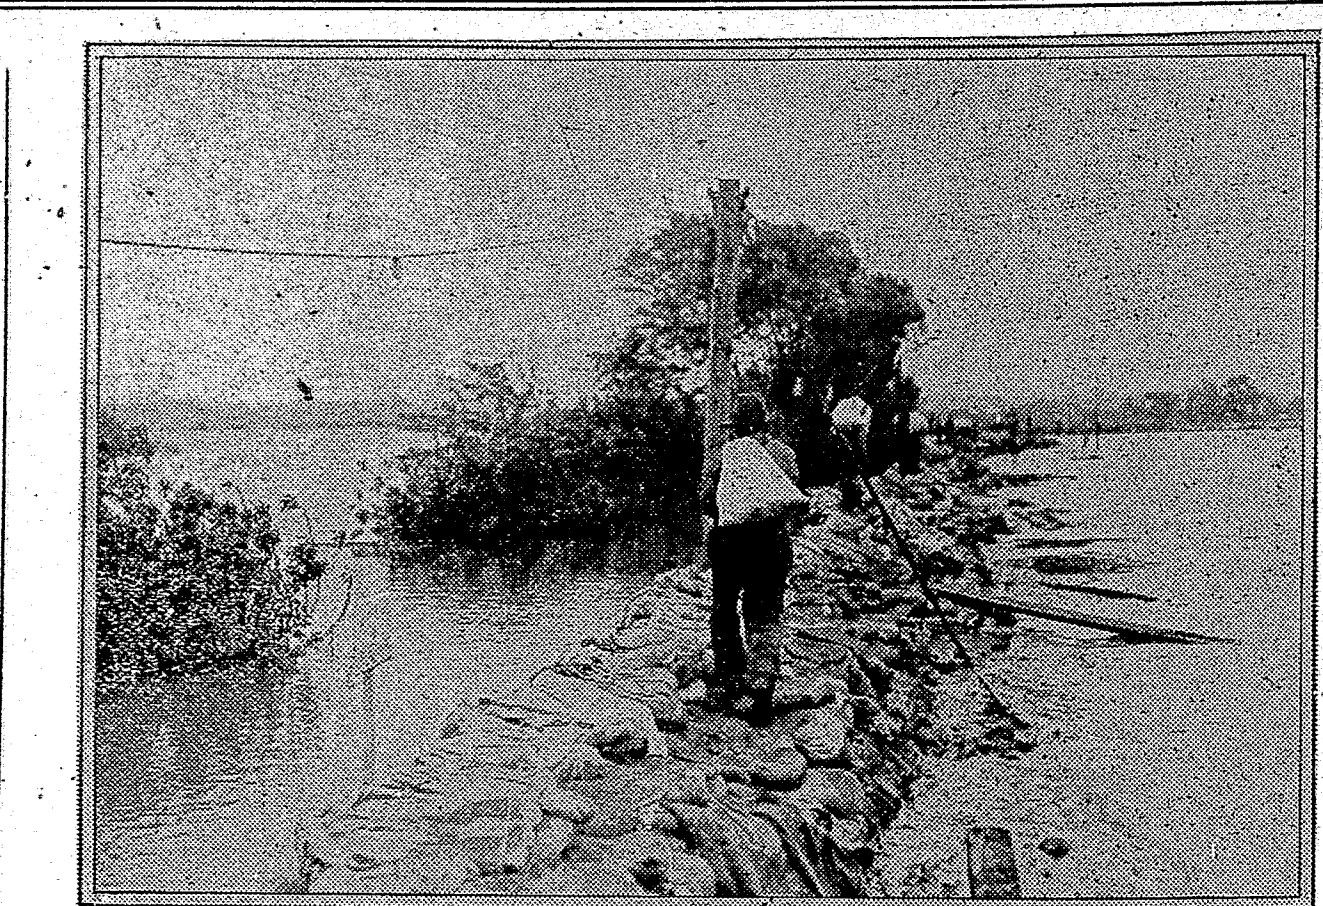

At the end of this period the stockings should be lifted out of the dye bath and the correct amount of mordant added. The mordant sets the dye. Some dyes call for salt, and some require vinegar. Add it all at once and stir the mixture before reentering the stockings. This second period of boiling is about twenty minutes and, just as in the first case, the material must be stirred constantly.

The stockings should then be rinsed until the last rinse water is practically clear.

Stocking dyeing is easy, and a practical thing for any one to attempt. But, as with dyeing large quantities, it requires your concentrated attention and adherence to directions, or the results will not warrant the time expended.

The tinting of stockings is even easier to accomplish, as it eliminates the boiling process. The tints are not quite so fast as the boiled dyes, and are preferable for very light shades rather than the darker tones. White stockings, which have become yellowed can easily be returned to a white condition with a tint. The tint must be thoroughly dissolved before adding the stockings, so as to prevent any possibility of spots.

The mother of small children will probably welcome the suggestion of dyeing the little socks to match their dresses. With the dye bath at your command, you can save yourself a great deal of hunting through the shops looking for socks of just the right shade.

Waters of Potomac Flood Countryside

A scene at one of the experimental farms of the Department of Agriculture, on the Virginia side of the Potomac River, when it was under water as a result of the heavy floods of the Potomac. Workmen constructed dikes of sandbags in order to halt the further rise of waters.

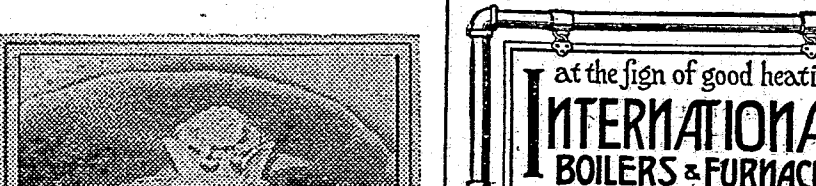

This Tiger Smokes and Likes It

According to Col. Selig of the Selig Zoo in Los Angeles, he has the only cigar-smoking tiger in captivity. The tiger's trainer, George Carosella, has the animal trained to do almost everything the trainer can do. Photo shows the trainer giving His Royal Nibs a light.

The Happiest Mother on Mothers' Day

Mrs. Nancy J. Martin, mother of Major F. L. Martin, the commander of the U. S. A. Air Service flying around the world, says she was the happiest mother in the world on Mothers' Day, when she learned that Major Martin had reached safety after having been missing in the Alaskan wilds for a week.
